THE PARIS SALON.

A Surprising Amount of Favor Shown to American Artists.

Some of the Principal Works of the Modern French Painters.

PARIS, May 17 .- Paris is filled with strangers and Parisians. The city begins to look like its old self. A little sunlight goes a great way. Spring coy and distant, like a young maid before her emancipation, promes to bud into immediate summer. So much the better.

The principal attraction is the Salon. There are many splendid canvases, and we note with pride the fact that American artists divide the honors with French and other exhibitors. According to many celebrated critics, they in many instances surpass the efforts of some of the best known modern efforts of some of the best known modern painters. Among the well known names we may mention Bierstadt, Bridgeman, Church, Pearce, Dana, Healy, and Mosier.

The strongest painting is probably that of Charles Sprague Pearce, of Boston. A young woman walking in a field, carrying two heavy buckets, one in either hand. On each side the grass grows close to the path, in the background is the usual secompaniment to such a rural scene. Mr. Pearce has great talent. The coloring is very good; the drawing excellent, and the expression on the young girl's face, one which only nature could talent. The coloring is very good; the drawing excellent, and the expression on the young girl's face, one which only nature could have stamped. There is so much force in this ensemble that one readily recalls the picture when away, and even in imagination its striking points come up again before the eye, the expression of the face still haunting the memory. America may well be proud to claim so fine an artist.

"Sans Dot," (without a fortune) by Knight, is very much admired. This artist always chooses good subjects, and is particularly good at posing female figures. Mr. Healy is well known as one of the greatest living portraitists. His attempts are always successful in one sense, that of school, and the perfection which a steady hand and thorough knawledge of his art give. I prefer his male rather than female portraits. Besides he is unusually successful in painting children—an art that is most difficult, and one quite beyond the reach of even the greatest painters.

We regretted to see nothing of Mr. Walter Blackman. This young artist ranks first among American painters, but was too busy this year to even attempt the Salon. His studies are noticeable for fine drawing, naturalness of tone and expression. A more flattering apppeciation of his work lies in uralness of tone and expression. A more flattering apppeciation of his work lies in the extraordinary number of orders for pictures that he constantly receives.

It is really difficult for American artists to gain recognition from foreign painters.

Many of the works, in fact nearly all of those by American artists, are sent in with the name and this addition: "Pupil of Mr. So-aud-So," even if one has studied with the French master not more than a few months. An artist ouce explained to me that it was easier to gain admittance to the Salon under these circumstances, but the belief is scarcely creditable either to artist or the jury on exhi-

There are many fine works exposed, and hundreds of others utterly incomprehensible. hundreds of others utterly incomprehensible. The jury accept any canvas, no matter how poorly executed, if it only show a touch of originality. Frenchmen have a monomania for startling subjects, and startling treatment of the old standbys—Christian Martyrs, The Crucifixion, Magdalens, Virgin, Pilates, Diana, Susannah, Phyche, Aurora, and so on. M. Morot gives us a Jesus of Nazareth of most peculiar example. The head of the Saviour lies in abandonment on the right arm, pinioned like its mate to the cross. The features are good; the expression one of infinite sweetness and resignation. The artist, features are good; the expression one of infinite sweetness and resignation. The artist, in order to show his contempt for the old tale of the feet being nailed together to the cross, has quietly stretched the legs to a convenient width, the knee turning in, the calf out, and the foot again turning in. He has securely bound these members to the outer part of each side of the cross. This is originality with a vengeance. Moreover, the effect is bad, the idea undoubtedly false, and the execution of the lower part of the body very poor and faulty. Yet Morot is considered one of the great French artists.

Henner gives a Magdelen reading in the woods, called "La femme qui lit." I must say that I do not countenance levity with regard to religious subjects. After Coreggio's masterpiece one scarcely looks for an exact reproduction of another female lying in that exact position, painted, in those same colors, read-ing in the same book (let us hope it was not more immoral), and resting her hand on the same head, or in the same place of that other hand and that other head. Mr. Henner's model had slimmer ankles and wrists, but the back is more hollowed out, and the hips enjoy the usual amplitude of that of the nine-teenth century French woman. I can assure you that it is something very colossal. In jus-tice to a man of undoubted talent, I must say tice to a man of undoubted talent, I must say that Mr. Henner draws uncommonly well, poses with discretion, and colors with delicacy and taste. I decidedly object, however, to any artist imitating so well known and great a picture as the Correggio Magdalen. Let the new artist put his model in another position; let him give her a red gown instead of the garment of wonderful tint that Correggio has made famous—in short, let him make a has made famous—in short, let him make a good copy of a great master's work if his brain is so denuded of ideas that he can conceive nothing original. At least, let him avoid anything like the present ridiculous attempt. Perhaps he thought to treat the attempt. Perhaps he thought to treat the same subject better. I cannot say, but am sure of this: The only difference in the two pictures is that one is by Henner and the other by Correggio.

The execution of Gen. de Charette in 1796 at Nantes is a splendid effort. It is a large at Nantes is a splendid effort. It is a large canvas and one that attracts universal attention. The artist is J. Le Blaut, a man of great talent, certainly. In discussing the Salon I heard an incident apropos of this picture. The general asked to see the city for a last time before his death. The commanding officer himself offered to accompany him. The two started out and de Charette looked with uncommon interest at everything. He seemed uncommon interest at everything. He seemed to utterly ignore his impending doom. They walked up and down, around and about, finally the wearied officer stopped short with these words: "Well, Mr. General, time flies. Have you nearly finished with sightseeing. You should have been shot two hours ago."

"Great heaven let up go at any finished."

You should have been shot two hours ago,"
"Great heavens, let us go at once," responded de Chavette. "It is for the first time in my life that one can accuse me of having been behind time."
Bonguereau has a fine painting, Alma Parens. The little children, eight in number, are exquisitely natural and childlike. Most of the madounas with children have two faults—the virgius are vixens, and the babes adults.

the virgins are vixens, and the babes adults in vice and knowledge, to judge by their expression. A juvenile child, or a childlike juvenile, is a rarity on canvas. M. Bonguercan has succeeded admirably with his subject.

Macquart's canvas, L. Ete, is weak. The coloring is gorgeous, the women very beautiful and well drawn, but the whole is lame in comparison with his other works. He is always a great painter, but at times a work. the virgius are vixens, and the babes adults

Mrs. Hill, an American, contributes a bust in clay, which bears good promise. Our well known and distinguished American physician, Dr. Johnson, tells me that this bust is the result of only four months' study. He sent this lady to Cauterels, in the Pyrenees, for her voice, (She was studying for the paratal And while there also make the sent three process.) sent this lady to Cauterels, in the Pyrenees, for her voice. (She was studying for the opera.) And while there she met a sculptor, who showed her his studio. She was so taken with the idea of modeling in clay that she commenced at once, and behold the result. Her work was adjudged as so good that it passed the first time the jury thought upon it. Mrs. Hill should have a great future. What she has done in so short a time would be unbelievable, but the authenticity of my information is all that is most undoubted. Americans will be glad to know that the Americans will be glad to know that the eners of the Salon of '83 are more than shared by the American artists. In every branch of painting my compatriots have particularly distinguished themselves. Vice l'Amerique

INVESTIGATION THREATENED.

A Rumor that the Supervising Architect ts to Be Called to Account for Alleged Shortcomings. The investigation into the affairs of the supervising architect's office was commenced again at the Treasury department yesterday morning. Mr. James Coleman appeared as counsel for Mr. Murch, and Mr. John L. Thomas represented Architect Hill, Mr. Murch and Mr. Hill were both present. Mr. Coleman said he desired to put in evidence all papers bearing upon what are known as the 15 per cent. contract.

Mr. Blair, of the department of Justice, objected to the introduction of the evidence on the ground that the first contract with the Dix Island Granite company was made by Mr. Hill's predecessor in office, Mr. Mullett, and consequently had no bearing upon this investigation.

Mr. Coleman said it was evident that Mr. Blair and himself could not act in harmony in this investigation, and asked that the letter of Mr. Murch requesting the appointment of government counsel to assist him, upon which Mr. Blair was detailed, be withdrawn.

which Mr. Blair was detailed, be withdrawn. Chairman New said that in order to proceed to business the committee would let Mr. Blair's objection go over for the present. This was satisfactory to all concerned, and Mr. Coleman then offered in evidence a contract made in 1873 between ex-Supervising Architect Mullett and the Dix Island Granite company for furnishing stone for the New York

pany for furnishing stone for the New York postoffice.

Mr. Coleman said he proposed to show that this contract entitled the contractor to 15 per cent, profit, but that the latter, with the knowledge of Mr. Hill, who was then assistant supervising architect, increased the figures, and that new contracts were made with this company without advertising for proposals. Other contracts with the same company for work on the St. Louis, Boston. proposals. Other contracts with the same company for work on the St. Louis, Boston, and other public buildings were also offered in evidence. Mr. Coleman said he would also offer in evidence the regular weekly reports of the superintendents in charge of the construction of these buildings. Requisitions had been made for them several weeks ago, but they have not yet been furnished.

Mr. Thomas replied that the reports would be forthcoming in a few days.

be forthcoming in a few days.

Mr. Coleman then proposed that the committee issue subpossas for the appearance of mittee issue subponas for the appearance of certain witnesses, and that two experts be appointed—one to be designated by the committee, and the other by the prosecution—to investigate the alleged fraudulent granite contracts. He thought it could be shown that the government had paid hundreds of thousands of dollars more than the stone was worth at the highest market rates, and that work was paid for which was never performed.

Mr. Thomas objected to the appointment of experts, and the question was taken under consideration by the committee. After deliberation Mr. New stated that, as Mr. Steinmetz was already acting as an expert in this matter on behalf of Mr. Murch, there would be no difficulty in selecting another expert to represent the supervising architect.

Mr. Coleman then asked for an adjourn

Mr. Coleman then asked for an adjournment till Tuesday next in order to allow the experts time to examine the papers bearing on the contracts in question.

Mr. New said that the committee would consent to this arrangement so far as Mr. Murch's interests were concerned, but would meet on Monday next to hear evidence on the charges preferred by Pouison & Eges, of Brooklyn, and Manly, Cooper, & Co., of Philadelphia, whose witnesses are now in the city awaiting examination. The committee then adjourned till Monday.

Mr. A. S. Thomson, chief computer of the architect's office, has been detailed to represent Supervising Architect Hill as one of the experts to examine the papers relating to the

There is more beauty in a pair of vigorous, regular, uniform, and well-kept eyehrows, long, drooping, curved, and bewitching eyelashes, than people are aware of. A very unattractive eye assumes new beauty and greater influence when it looks from beneath long, well-developed, fascinating fringes. In oriental countries these are considered to be the most distinguishing features of personal beauty, and a lady's lashes are unattractive if not long and drooping. Our society ladies acknowledge these to be a rare adjunct of beauty, by resorting to the use of pencil and brush to supply artificially this facial adornment which nature has failed to supply to them in sufficient quantity.

THE HAIR.

An important branch of Dermatology is the treatment and management of the Hair. A thick, vigorous, luxuriant head of hair is one of the most distinguishing marks of personal beauty. To be regal haired is the pride of man and the glory of woman and is a personal adornment appreciated by every one. Every lady and gentleman who has the least regard for their personal americance should pay the strictest attention to the care, preservation, management, and treatment of the hair and scalp, so as to preserve its youthfulness and luxuriance as late in life as possible. No one should be bald or gray under 6.1 It is really surprising the number of young men who are becoming prematurely bald.
